

MICHIGAN Community Foundations

YOUTH Project

ABOUT

The Michigan Community Foundations' Youth Project (MCFYP) was created as a result of a challenge grant offered by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation through the Council of Michigan Foundations (CMF) to communities across Michigan with two goals. The first goal was to ensure that every community in Michigan's 83 counties had access to a community foundation. The second goal was to create endowed youth funds overseen by high school age youth - a Youth Advisory Council (YAC) - in every community foundation.

The challenge grant provided for up to $1 million dollars for the youth fund if the community foundation raised up to $2 million for other endowed funds. When the challenge grant ended in 1997, both goals were achieved with 86 youth funds created.

The Youth Advisory Councils are made up of high school age students who are committed to changing their communities through philanthropy. YACs primarily focus on three fundamental areas: Fund Development, Youth Empowerment and Grantmaking. They also organize and engage in various forms of community service in the areas which they represent.

In 1999, CMF made MCFYP a permanent part of Michigan's philanthropy infrastructure by adding the MCFYP Committee as a bylaw required Committee. Nominated by their peers and approved by the President of CMF, the 12 YAC members or alumni of YACs and 3 YAC advisors serve as representatives for the 86 Youth Advisory Councils in the state of Michigan. The MCFYP Committee's primary responsibility is to design and implement The annual statewide Youth Leadership Conference as well as work with CMF in promoting youth philanthropy.

Since 1991 more than 15,000 high school youth have been engaged as YACers to award more than $33 million in grants for youth issues. More than 1,800 high school youth serving on 86 community foundation YACs are annually granting more than $2 million for youth issues. The Kellogg Foundation Youth Challenge has successfully launched a global movement as summarized in the timeline on the back of this document.
